Crisis Response Team

For companies experiencing a national health crisis or global pandemic; an industrial crisis, such as an accidental death, explosion, chemical spill; or a looming financial crisis, time is of the essence. In these emergencies, it is important to notify your crisis response team so they may be deployed into action to assist your business immediately.

Hall Estill's Crisis Response Team is comprised of attorneys with decades of experience in assisting companies with emergencies of all kinds, including business interruption, travel bans, industrial accidents, pipeline and terminal explosions, drilling rig accidents, building collapses, propane fires and explosions, as well as oilfield and industrial pollution, financial crises and similar catastrophic incidents.

Our attorneys on the Crisis Response Team have a wide range of experience. The team includes a former attorney for the Tulsa County District Attorney's Office and a national environmental consultant. In addition, members of the team have worked closely with local and federal entities on behalf of their clients, including the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Transportation and the Oklahoma Human Rights Commission.

Our knowledge within this realm is extensive and serves as a benefit to all clients we serve regionally and nationally who engage Hall Estill as their Crisis Response Team.
