

Marital Agreements

Statistics show that at least half of all marriages end in divorce. While no one wants to be in that category, realistically it is important for couples to discuss the financial concerns that will arise in the unfortunate event that the partnership fails. To that end, marital agreements are an effective tool to keep the distribution of assets out in the open should the situation of divorce arise. We assist clients in the preparation of a variety of agreements, depending on each couple's situation. These include marital, premarital, postnuptial, separation, reconciliation and property settlement agreements.
