Oklahoma City Employment Attorney Elaine R. Turner was asked to comment on a story "The ABCs Of The California Gig Worker Ruling" for PYMNTS.com. She discusses the limits the law places on just who can be classified as a contractor, while also making it harder for platform companies to classify those workers as independent contractors.

Turner said the case trains a spotlight on larger issues – chief among them whether individuals have the right to pursue work on their own terms at the time and place of their choosing, and whether companies who seek to employ them should face restrictions in hiring them.
