Hall Estill Announces Election of Three New Shareholders

January 5, 2026

Hall Estill, Oklahoma's leading law firm, is pleased to announce the election of three new shareholders. Hall Estill continues its legacy of legal expertise and client-focused service with offices in Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Denver and Northwest Arkansas.

"Our firm is proud to welcome our new shareholders," said Steve Ray, Managing Partner at Hall Estill. "With their diverse experiences and approaches, they will continue to provide sound counsel to our clients and their colleagues at the firm."

New Shareholders:

Teak Hull is based in the Tulsa office, where he represents health care systems and providers in medical malpractice litigation, defending matters from inception through trial. He also advises clients on electronic discovery issues, with a particular focus on matters involving electronic health record systems. In addition to his practice, Teak serves as Chair of the Board of Directors for the Child Advocacy Network.

Bryan Lynch, who is in the Oklahoma City office, provides practical, tailored guidance in complex transactions, high-stakes litigation, and day-to-day legal needs. He serves as a strategic partner across corporate, litigation, and regulatory matters, with experience in banking, energy, and technology and particular insight into the needs of dentists, pharmacists, and small business owners.

Jeffrey Wilson, from the Tulsa office, is an experienced attorney with nearly 40 years of practice in health care, litigation, and medical malpractice, focusing on drafting trial and appellate briefs for the firm's medical malpractice defense group, as well as general appellate representation.
