Industry experts are surmising that it is a matter of time before the effects of COVID-19/coronavirus spread to the construction industry's current and future projects. Michael Keester, a shareholder/partner at the national law firm Hall Estill, says contractors, architects and construction workers will potentially be impacted by COVID-19.

"The coronavirus is affecting everything from travel to sporting events to college class attendance to work environments, including construction projects," Keester tells GlobeSt.com.
