"We are very pleased with our recent associate hires," said Mike Cooke, managing partner for Hall Estill. "Drew, Amanda, Ty and Conner come from very different backgrounds, yet the common thread is they are remarkable talented young attorneys."

Drew Boone joins Hall Estill's corporate/commercial practice in the Tulsa office. Prior to joining Hall Estill, Boone pursued his interest in politics by serving as a congressional intern for Congressman Markwayne Mullin and the director of voter identification for Congressman James Lankford's U.S. Senate Campaign. Amanda Lowe also joins Hall Estill's Tulsa office, where she will primarily practice in the firm's litigation areas. Lowe graduated from the University of Tulsa College of Law, where she was a member of the Tulsa Law Review and the Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity.

Ty Schoenhals, who will practice in the litigation and energy and natural resources area, joined Hall Estill's Oklahoma City office after graduating from the University of Oklahoma College of Law. While in law school, he was a member of the Oklahoma Law Review, as well as the first-place team that won the 2018 Andrews Kurth Kenyon Moot Court National Championship, a tournament reserved for the nation's top 16 moot court programs.
