Chance Holland focuses his practice in the defense of healthcare professionals, transportation companies, and national insurers. For more than a decade, he has acquired substantial jury trial experience. As a result of his rural Oklahoma upbringing coupled with the professional mentorship he received early in his legal career, he is comfortable in the courtroom and effective in presenting his clients' defenses to Oklahoma jurors from all walks of life.

Chance began his career representing insureds in third-party personal injury cases as well as insurers in first-party actions brought by their insureds. He is active in the Oklahoma City community and is a member of Lawyers Helping Lawyers, an Oklahoma Bar Association committee dedicated to providing support for Oklahoma attorneys struggling with addiction, depression, and other difficulties that affect their practice. A proud tribal member, he is also a member of the Cherokee Nation Bar.
